Embiid's rise to dominance has been nothing short of remarkable. He was drafted by the Sixers with the third overall pick in the 2014 NBA draft, but he missed his first two seasons due to injury. In his rookie season, Embiid averaged 20.2 points and 7.8 rebounds per game, but he also missed 31 games due to injury. In his sophomore season, Embiid averaged 22.9 points and 11.0 rebounds per game, but he missed 26 games due to injury.

Despite the injuries, Embiid has shown flashes of brilliance throughout his career. In the 2017-18 season, Embiid averaged 24.4 points, 11.8 rebounds, and 3.7 blocks per game, and he was named to the All-NBA Second Team. In the 2018-19 season, Embiid averaged 27.3 points, 13.5 rebounds, and 3.4 blocks per game, and he was named to the All-NBA First Team.

Embiid's dominance is due to a number of factors. He has a unique combination of size, strength, and skill. He is 7'0" tall and 280 pounds, but he moves with the grace and agility of a much smaller player. He is also incredibly strong, and he uses his strength to his advantage on both ends of the court. Embiid is a skilled scorer, rebounder, defender, and passer. He can score from anywhere on the court, and he is one of the best rebounders in the NBA. He is also a good defender, and he is capable of guarding both big men and small forwards.

Embiid's dominance is also due to his work ethic. He is one of the hardest working players in the NBA, and he is always looking for ways to improve his game. He spends countless hours in the gym, and he is always studying his opponents. Embiid is also a very coachable player, and he is always willing to listen to his coaches and teammates.

Embiid's dominance has had a major impact on the Sixers. He has helped them become one of the most competitive teams in the Eastern Conference. In the 2017-18 season, the Sixers reached the Eastern Conference semifinals, and in the 2018-19 season, they reached the Eastern Conference finals. Embiid is a key part of the Sixers' success, and he is poised to lead them to even greater heights in the future.
