This book provides detailed information on the history, design, and variations of the Luger pistol, as well as pricing and collecting tips. The Standard Catalog Of Luger Aarron Davis is a must-have reference for any collector or enthusiast of the Luger pistol.

History of the Luger Pistol

The Luger pistol was designed by Georg Luger in the late 19th century. Luger was an Austrian engineer who worked for the German arms manufacturer Deutsche Waffen- und Munitionsfabriken (DWM). Luger's design was based on the earlier Borchardt C-93 pistol, but it incorporated a number of improvements, including a toggle-lock action, a detachable magazine, and a grip safety.

The Luger pistol was first adopted by the Swiss military in 1900. In 1908, the Luger was adopted by the German military as the standard sidearm for the German armed forces. The Luger served in this role until 1945, when it was replaced by the Walther P38 pistol.

Design of the Luger Pistol

The Luger pistol is a semi-automatic pistol that operates on a toggle-lock action. The toggle-lock action is a unique design that allows the Luger to be fired very quickly. The Luger pistol has a detachable magazine that holds eight rounds of ammunition. The Luger pistol is also equipped with a grip safety, which prevents the pistol from being fired if the shooter's hand is not properly positioned on the grip.

The Luger pistol is a well-made and reliable firearm. It is also a very accurate pistol. The Luger pistol is a popular choice for target shooting and self-defense.

Variations of the Luger Pistol

The Luger pistol was produced in a variety of different variations. These variations include:

- Luger P08: The Luger P08 was the standard production model of the Luger pistol. It was produced from 1908 to 1945.
- Luger P04: The Luger P04 was a compact version of the Luger pistol. It was produced from 1904 to 1945.
- Luger P06: The Luger P06 was a subcompact version of the Luger pistol. It was produced from 1906 to 1945.
- Luger Artillery Model: The Luger Artillery Model was a long-barreled version of the Luger pistol. It was produced from 1914 to 1918.
- Luger Navy Model: The Luger Navy Model was a version of the Luger pistol that was issued to the German navy. It was produced from 1914 to 1918.

Pricing and Collecting Tips

The Luger pistol is a popular collector's item. The value of a Luger pistol depends on a number of factors, including the model, the condition, and the rarity. A standard production Luger P08 in good condition can be worth several thousand dollars. A rare Luger variant, such as the Artillery Model or the Navy Model, can be worth tens of thousands of dollars.

If you are interested in collecting Luger pistols, there are a few things you should keep in mind. First, it is important to do your research. Learn as much as you can about the different Luger variations and their values. Second, it is important to buy from a reputable dealer. This will help you avoid buying a counterfeit or a stolen pistol. Third, it is important to store your Luger pistols in a safe and secure location.

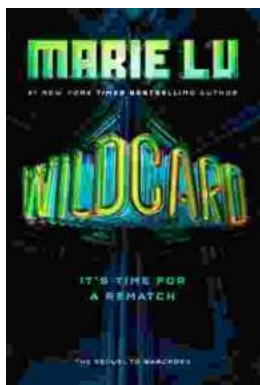

The Luger pistol is a classic firearm that is still popular with collectors and shooters today. The Standard Catalog Of Luger Aarron Davis is the most comprehensive guide to the Luger pistol ever published. This book is a must-have reference for any collector or enthusiast of the Luger pistol.
