application of research in educational settings. EdD graduates typically pursue careers in education leadership, administration, and teaching. The PhD, on the other hand, is a research doctorate that prepares graduates for careers in academia and research. PhD graduates may become professors, researchers, or work in industry or government.

The Significance of Dissertations and Theses

Dissertations and theses are major research projects that students must complete as part of their doctoral or master's degree requirements. They also contribute to the body of knowledge in their chosen area of study.

It should also be something that you are passionate about and that you feel confident in your ability to research and write about. Consider consulting with your advisor or other experts in your field to help you narrow down your topic.
